Dear guests and colleagues,

Over the past 50 years intensive agricultural production lead to a dramatic change in farmland productivity and decline of biodiversity and environmental health in many regions of Common Europe. They are the result of continuing water pollution, soil degradation, accelerating climate change and even increasing demand for food and energy. The future of the EU common agricultural policy must be based on supporting sustainable agricultural practices, and related agricultural research to keep main EU's goals and commitments, such as stabile crop productivity, food security and environmental health.

It is expected that on the course of 21st century many of well-known symptoms of climate change will take place. However, at present a great deal of uncertainties persists in the both diversity and depth of their effect on functional mechanism within the crop – canopy – ecosystem – region level.

We consider the joint topic of the ESNA meeting 2012 “Advances in agrobiology research and their benefits to the future” and the workshop “Recent advances in plant biotechnology” as the opportunity to group together the specialists from different fields of crop biology, ecology and improving technologies, who may go deeper into the research methodology and techniques of crop food, feed and bioenergy production under changing environment and be inspired in searching for new conceptional approaches of solving this problem. We also take into account knowledge of molecular biology, genetics and eco-physiology resulting in new technological practises in plant breeding as well as in plant/crop biotechnologies.

The main organizers of the 41st ESNA meeting 2012, the Slovak University of Agriculture in Nitra, Institute of Plant Genetics and Biotechnologies of the S.A.S. in Nitra and Plant Production Research Center in Piešťany are well experienced in the conference topic hoping to attract qualified specialists to put new ideas on a conference “round table” and strenghten the effort for more effective integration within the agricultural research.

We believe the conference intention and scientific content supported by a friendly, familiar and enjoyable environment of High Tatras place will attract Your attention and meet all Your professional expectations!

We are looking forward to meeting you at the conference in September 2012! Welcome in Stará Lesná in High Tatras (Slovakia)!

What is ESNA?

The European Society for New Methods in Agricultural Research (ESNA) is an international society originally established in Wageningen (The Netherlands) in 1969 with the aim to exchange new ideas and techniques for promotion of advancement in agricultural sciences. At the present it covers different aspects of scientific research in agriculture. For this reason it works ideologically in 3 main working groups (WG) with related topics:

WG 1 – Plant Sciences (plant functional biology, ecology, productivity, technological approaches for plant improvement including biotechnologies, etc.)

WG 2 – Soil Sciences (plant – soil – microbiology system relationships, wastes, pollutants, quantity and quality of products, biotechnology, etc.)

WG 3 – Environment and Agricultural Sustainability (food preservation and safety, food chain regulation, animal sciences and technology, pest control in agriculture, technologies for sustainable agriculture, etc.).

The Society organizes annual meetings in various European countries and the scientific programme is devoted to fundamental and applied issues in above-mentioned areas.

For selected applicants, ESNA Secretary will pay the Borkovec travel scholarships (100,- EURO) during the ESNA meeting in Stará Lesná Slovakia.

The basic criteria for the grants are age, ESNA membership and good quality of submitted paper. Both Application form for grant and Borkovec travel scholarship are available at the web page of the conference (www.esna.uniag.sk).

Please, fulfil the application form and send it to the Local Secretariat of the ESNA 2012 meeting together with short curriculum vitae and abstract of the paper you wish to present! The documents should be also sent to the appropriate chairman of the ESNA working group (WG1, WG2 or WG3) and ESNA Secretary in Brno (CZ) by May 15, 2012!! Any application of grants submitted after the deadline will not be accepted!

The ESNA president in collaboration with chairpersons of the ESNA working groups will decide and give a final approval of the applicants by June 15, 2012! After receiving grant, the grantists are requested to send urgently to the Local Secretariat of the meeting message (by mail or fax) that they accept the grant and will participate at the meeting.
